Trends in student numbers and student nationalities?

Although we do not have official number of students that have travelled abroad last year, yet we are confident enough to say that Turkey's study abroad industry has grown in 2011 and further growth is expected in 2012

Visa regime – any new developments?

UK visa procedures are clearer to agencies and students now, after years of struggle. But still far from being a perfect system.

US visa procedures remained unchanged in 2010

Canadian visa situation is better than the last year and last year was far better than the year before.

EU visa are now easier to get

Government Relations – any developments with your or other governments?

No direct links with government however our members deal with many government supported students individually.

Initiatives/Developments for your association?

A third association has emerged in Turkey last year. Some of the members that left to join that association have now come back to TEAG. Many still believe this fragmentation has been encouraged by FELCA's decision to accept second association from one country.

TEAG has a new office and a secretary to assist management board.
